

AGENDA LAUNCHES ALL-NEW SECURITY WEB SITE

After extensive consultation with clients, Agenda has launched a completely new web site detailing the services, resources and specialist expertise available through its rapidly expanding Security Services division.

The new web site, which can be found at www.agenda-security.co.uk, is not only easier to access and navigate, it is packed with information of real value to any professional who is seriously interested in the security of their organisation and its various assets.

Completely rewritten with customer needs in mind, the site includes an upgraded search engine; copies of Agenda's free Security Now publication and for those clients interested in Agenda's independent accreditations there are copies of Certificates and re-accreditation documents.

Norman Mortell, Director responsible for the security services division commented: "The main emphasis at launch is to let our current clients know the whole range of services that we can offer and show the rigorous systems that we have in place to ensure a top quality service."

New sections describing Agenda's ISO27001, social engineering and other consultancy services, network security options and their innovative Values Profiling options, each with supporting case studies and report samples, have also been added, so that clients can see exactly what they are getting.

In addition, the site features Agenda's rapidly developing intelligence gathering services. Agenda Security Consultant and former police officer, Richard Connelly, said: "Continual improvement in Internet and search technology makes previously hard to find information more accessible. The growth of social network sites, blogs and general Internet "noise", we use advanced techniques allied with our investigative know-how to save our clients' time and effort and to deliver focused, timely and meaningful reports".

Agenda has also enhanced its security training options, offering everything from fire safety to countering animal rights extremist tactics. Agenda's Steve Mayger, an MOD-approved trainer, said: "All of our courses are bespoke to the client but I feel that the new web site gives the client much more information about what we can provide. Clients can choose one of the many off-the-shelf options described, or we can develop a whole programme to meet their needs."
